Upon landing in Pokhara we take drive to Nayapul from where we start our trek. From Nayapul we walk more or less leveled trail and some stone steps too following Modi Khola to reach Jhinu Danda. Upon reaching Jhinu Danda, we see nice views of Annapurna South, Hinchuli and Machapuchhre above us. We might relax our tired bodies by dipping in the hot spring pond at Jhinu Danda.

Walking Time: 5-6 hrs. Accommodation: Local Lodge. Included Meal: B, L, D

Day 3: Jhinu Danda to Bamboo (2310m/7576ft)

We wake up early to get glimpse of the Hinunculi, Machhapuchhre, and Annapurna South at sunrise. After breakfast, we trek all the way to Bamboo through Chhomrong and Sinuwa village. The trail to Chhomrong is all up hill. We descend down on stone steps to Chhomrong Khola, cross the river on a suspension bridge. We climb out of the side valley through the tiny settlement of Tilche through the forests of bamboo, rhododendron and oak. We climb further on a rocky trail to Sinuwa. Slightly uphill comparatively easier walk for about an hour through rhododendron forest up to a small waterfall. We can spot Langur monkeys in the forest. After a short undulation, we descend through long and steep stone staircase to Bamboo.

Day 4: Bamboo to Machhapuchhare Base Camp (3700m/12135ft)

Today also our trek follows Modi Khola valley/gorge. After an hour and half first gentle and then steep ascent, we reach Himalaya Hotel. Occasionally, we see fantastic views of Machhapuchhre and the valley ahead along the trail today. Past Himalaya Hotel it's a steep climb up through bamboo thickets before reaching Hinku Cave. We cross a small river after a small descent before climbing again to Deurali, the most amiable stretch of the day. The vegetation is sparser, allowing delightful views of the valley and the river below. We can also see wispy waterfalls cascading on sheer rock face cliffs. We cross the small bridge on the Modi Khola and continue climbing up the wide and boulder scattered glacial valley. The Machhapuchhre looks very different now as the vegetation is sparse of mainly upland rhododendron. We cross Modi Khola once again and after following it for a while we start climbing up to Machhapuchhre Base camp. The trail leaves the river and ascends steadily towards the moraine ridge ahead on the left side of the valley behind which the lodges are situated. We feel rewarded reaching Machhapuchhre base camp as we see majestic views of the magnificent Mt. Machhapuchhre along with Mt. Hiunchuli, Annapurna South, Annapurna I, Annapurna III, Gandharvachuli and Gangapurna, etc.

Walking Time: 7 hrs. Accommodation: Local Lodge. Included Meal: B, L, D

The vegetation disappears on our way to Annapurna Base Camp and the trail climbs steadily up the gorge between the moraine ridge of Annapurna Glacier and Hiunchuli Peak with an incredible view of Annapurna South and Baraha Shikhar ahead and Machhapucchhre looking back. In about two hours we reach Annapurna Base Camp. At Annapurna Base Camp, we are surrounded by Himalayan massifs. The sanctuary boasts of a vibrant view as there is nothing to block the 360-degree panorama including compelling views of the Machhapuchhre, Annapurna I, Annapurna south, Hiunchuli and so many other peaks. We can walk to the cairns at the edge of the moraine, and walk along this ridge for good views of Annapurna I and the glacier. We trek down to Deurali.

It is an uphill trek to Kuldighar followed by a downhill walk to Chhomrong Khola. Then climb the stone steps to Chhomrong.
