

Pisang Peak Climbing - 18 Days

Pisang Peak Climbing is one of the technical peak climbing in Nepal, situated at an altitude of 6091 meters. German expeditions made the first ascent of Pisang Peak in 1955, and since then, thousands of climbers have successfully climbed to the summit of Pisang Peak. The Pisang peak ascends above Pisang village and yak pastures in a stable slope of ice and snow in the Annapurna region of Nepal.

Peak climbing has been a popular activity in Nepal. The Pisang Peak climbing starts after driving towards the Beshisahar from Kathmandu. The base camp is set up at the Kharka(4800m), where we will reach after passing through the Pisang village. The summit of the Pisang peak offers spectacular views of Annapurna Himalayan ranges along with Gangapurna and other beautiful snow-capped mountains. Next, we will trace back the same trekking trails to reach Phedi and then Muktinath. Muktinath is a famous pilgrimage site holding great importance for Hindus and Buddhists. Along the trails, we cross through the highest pass of the world, Thorungla pass. Further, we trek towards Jomsom, take a short mountain flight to reach Pokhara, and finally return to Kathmandu.

Previous climbing experience is required to join this amazing Pisang peak climbing trip. However, our guides and professionals will provide expert guidance on climbing and using mountaineering tools before attempting it. A good level of physical fitness with a passion for trekking and climbing and a positive attitude, and a never-give-up attitude are essentials before embarking on this trip.

Your holiday in Nepal would certainly be adventurous and full of excitement and thrill. Join our ultimate Pisang peak climbing trip, which is also the perfect blend of trekking in the Annapurna region and create wonderful memories in the heart of the Himalayas. For further details inquire us now.
